

About Studieförbundet

The first educational associations were established over 100 years ago by people seeking to change society. Today there are 10 educational associations, all of which focus on slightly different fields. These associations all receive financial support from the state, county council and municipality to ensure everyone over the age of 13 has the opportunity to exchange and develop new skills and knowledge together with others, throughout their lives. This is known as popular education.

One of Sweden's largest educational associations, Studieförbundet, offers a wide range of study circles, courses, cultural events and lectures. Studieförbundet is not affiliated to a single political party or religion and supports thousands of study circles and clubs/associations throughout Sweden. Specialising in the natural and animal world, culture and the environment, we are actively committed to sustainable development.

Learning together is more fun

Above all, we are here to help people grow and develop together with others – while also having fun!

A great way to learn together

Start up a study circle – it couldn't be easier!

Want to learn something new, maybe with your friends or club/association? Then why not start up a study circle with Studieförbundet? We can help in lots of different ways!

The study circle is a unique educational forum with a long history in Sweden. The concept is as simple as it is ingenious, bringing together small groups of people who wish to study together on their own initiative. The group draws up a common study plan and sets objectives for the subject they have in mind.

Already know what you want to learn? Get in touch with the Studieförbundet branch in your area and we can help draw up a plan for your circle, or if you'd rather get advice on what to study, we can offer a number of suggestions.

Looking for others to share your interest? By working together, we can look at different ways of reaching more participants. In other words, you decide what you want to do and we help you make it possible.

Starting up a study circle with us is free of charge, and you can choose just about any subject imaginable. Always open to new ideas, we can also help you with study materials, suitable premises or online solutions. We also boast an extensive network of knowledge and experience across different fields, primarily within our specialist areas of the natural and animal world, culture and the environment.

Useful information about study circles

- A study circle consists of a minimum of three people who meet up at least three times.
- The subject is totally optional: what you do and what you learn is totally up to you.
- You can meet up face-to-face, online or through a combination of both.

Organise an event with our support

We can also offer support if you, your study circle or club/association want to arrange a lecture, exhibition, dance show or performance. In most cases, we can help to provide equipment, suitable premises and advertising.
